His 2650 begins with classical civilizations unraveling and ends with the threads of modernity. It moves from the global reach of the nomadic Mongols in the 13th century to the global export of the French Revolution circa 1800. The course introduces the rich source material of the early modern world, as well as the techniques of historical statistical analysis. It also provides a broad narrative of events, ideas, and movements.

Course objectives:

- Distinguish and position temporally and spatially the main historical events and movements between the Black Death and the revolutions of the late-18th century; assess their causes and effects.
- Distinguish primary sources from secondary works; use both to make a historical argument
- Recognize quantitative data among various historical sources, and evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of basic statistical methods in evaluating historical sources
- Understand and be able to make claims based on comparative history (between nations and civilizations) and chronology (change over time)
- Understand how to use both quantitative and qualitative sources from a period in historical argument
- Be able to draw information from selected online databases of primary sources, including the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade Database

Consult periodically the enhanced version of this syllabus <<http://ux1.eiu.edu/~nekey/syllabi/2560.htm>>. Generally, I lecture on Tuesday (WTWA) and we discuss documents/readings (WofH) on Thursday (bring the appropriate book to class). Any revisions to the syllabus or this schedule will be limited, for pedagogical reasons (changes in due dates, readings, specific essay questions, review sheets), and will be announced in class in advance and posted on d2l (see below).

Theatrum orbis terrarum (1635)

His 2560 is designated writing-intensive. Exams and online discussion of sources will be in paragraph/essay form. The Slave Trade Group Paper will put together everything you have learned in the Statistics Units (see below), and then ask you to work together to write up your findings. thirds asks you to construct a basic comparative table from the Transatlantic Slave Trade Database and then a very brief paper making a narrative from that table(s).

Stats Units 1-5. The EIU History Department has decided to introduce historical statistics (Stats) in this course. There are five Stats Units. Each has an explanatory narrative in d2l for each, as well as a quiz on that narrative (7% total). Each has a calculation exercise using material culled from the TransAtlantic Slave Trade Database, and a corresponding quiz (10%). The first four units have a Word Problem quiz (8%), an essay with figures pulling together what you learned for that unit. You may retake the Narrative Quizzes and the Calculation Quizzes several times if you wish, and your top scores count. We will do word problems in class so you know the sort of questions you will encounter. The deadlines for these quizzes are fixed and definite. So plan to begin your work on each unit early. At the end you will be assigned to a group to write a paper based on data from the slave trade (13%). We will get through this and you will be thinking more logically about history as a result.

Participation is required (12%, based on your contribution to in-class and online discussion as well as in-class brief quizzes). More than three absences whether excused or not (you don't need to tell me) will begin to lower your participation grade. If you are/will be absent, please consult the online syllabus first to see what was/will be covered. Your grade as a whole may suffer if you miss assigned quizzes or exams (the online quizzes are online and open for at least a week, so absence doesn't apply). There is, of course, no make-up for the final. Other make-ups will be at my discretion.

There is a Mentor Report (3%) required for departmental program purposes in this course. You should meet with another professor in the department, after consulting with Dr. Key, and write up your meeting.

In order to keep us all on task and minimize distractions, let's not read newspapers, study or write for another class, text, make, or receive phone calls, email or visit non-class-related sites during class time. Except when noted, you may and you should BYOD (bring your own device) to take notes (DO take notes), access course material, or look up course-related information. I will give notice if specific days are device-driven (laptops are available for use in classroom). (Anyone with a documented disability should let me know in the first week or two of class so that we can make appropriate accommodations.) History department graduate students tutor in CH 2726. And ask me for clarifications. I will talk about history virtually anytime.

You must purchase at the University Bookstore, sign, and turn in all exam books more than a week before the first mid-term exam (that is by 9 Feb.). No one may take the exams (12% each for 1 & 2, 15%for the final) without an exam book. Exams are a combination of essays, short-answer, matching, and mapping. Improvement during the semester will mitigate disastrous performance early. The d2l page for this course includes useful information (policies, goals, and additional help at the department and university level).
